the story

An assisted living facility helps provide a home for those that need assistance with their daily lives, while also leaving room for patient independence. Creating a safe and comfortable place to do so is the job responsibility of any assisted living home's staff. This particular facility was excited to expand, adding a 18,900 sq. ft. addition, including an adult daycare space, as well as remodeling approximately 3,600 sq.ft for their memory care unit. Ensuring that the materials used in the space would protect the building while also avoiding a sterile, traditional assisted-living aesthetic, was key in the success of the project.
